2ND SUNDAY OF LENT

Then a cloud came, casting a shadow over them; from the cloud came a voice, "This is my beloved Son. Listen to him." Suddenly, looking around, they no longer saw anyone but Jesus alone with them.

A WORD FROM THE PASTOR

So we come to a final point worth noting. Two of Rahner's very first theological essays, dating from the early 1930s, studied the notion of the "spiritual senses" in the writings of the early church father Origen and in the medieval Augustinian tradition. It would seem, then, that Rahner returned toward the end of his life to those early explorations on the spiritual senses and the Christian mystical tradition. In doing so he returned to the wisdom of the concluding line of T.S. Eliot's "East Coker": "In my end is my beginning."

Throughout his theological journey, Rahner sought to broaden our appreciation of the mystical, not as "extracurricular" to the Christian way, reserved for the privileged few, but as intrinsic to Christian living, yesterday and today. He challenges us to extend our imagination beyond the examples of those classical mystics who exhibit extraordinary spiritual gifts. He sought to "democratize" mystical experience, viewing it as the full flowering of the Christian life: a life of relations transformed in Christ, heralding the new creation. Though employing different dictions, I am sure Rahner would celebrate the insights of his fellow Jesuit, Gerard Manley Hopkins, S.J. Purified senses enable us to perceive that "Christ plays in ten thousand places, lovely in limbs, and lovely in eyes not his."

In and through all the intricacies of his signature "transcendental method," Rahner's pole star remained the love of Jesus, who alone fulfills our human desire for unconditional love and communion. Communion not only with the Lord but also with all the members of his body. For loving Jesus is always inseparable from loving those who Jesus loves.

I hope this three part essay by Rahner has enlightened you. May God continue to guide in your path to the Easter time. God bless.

Fr. Leonard L. Marrujo
